About me

Philosophy graduate from National Chengchi University.

I excel at untangling abstract and complex requirements — approaching each feature from the user's perspective and context of use, then translating it into clear, verifiable design logic, and communicating it effectively with stakeholders.

I'm used to working in fast-changing environments, enjoy embracing uncertainty, and I'm skilled at prioritizing features under resource constraints to build product experiences that are both practical and enjoyable.

I've worked at both design agencies and in-house product teams, with experience spanning 0-to-1 product building and iterative optimization across finance, events, IoT, SaaS, and enterprise systems — covering research, analysis, feature design, and project resource management.

I also bring experience from edtech and payments startups, with a digital marketing background and an understanding of market dynamics and conversion — I enjoy cross-domain challenges and have award-winning work to show for it.
